

LIFE TAKES ON TEXTURE

ARTIUM is Latin for "belonging to the arts".

Our July meeting was an interesting demonstration of textures and techniques in Acrylic paint by contemporary artist Scott Dykema everyone learned something to try in their studio.

Our August meeting was Conservator Grace Walters from the Amon Carter Museum. Who ever suspected there was so much science in art conservation? Such an enlightening and interesting presentation.

Our September 20, Meeting will be Media - Drawing, Screen Printing, & Sculpture by Adam Palmer

Chris Burkett Service Center, 620 South Wisteria Street, Mansfield at 6:30p.m.

We lost Gary Crary July 18th He was our Vice President in 2020, was a friend and was instrumental in building ARTIUM into the great association it is today. Gary organized our computer files and secured our non profit status. I asked for his advice often and depended on his ability to find answers. Gary was a sweet and charming friend to us all and it was a shock to lose him so suddenly. I know you all miss him too. Please say a prayer for him and his family.

Guest Columnist - Dan Scott

Just a quick one today. I'm sharing an odd but surprisingly effective technique I stumbled upon in my latest painting. I had a bunch of old paint on my palette from the prior session. Instead of adding new paint, I took a shortcut and worked with the old stuff. It had a slightly dry, gummy consistency. Usually this would be painful to work with, but it worked surprisingly well for the late stage of this particular painting. The strokes were unique and impasto, unlike what you would get with fresh paint.

I'm unsure if this technique of working with slightly dry, gummy paint has many practical uses, but there's no harm in adding it to your painting tools.

And just goes to show that it's ok to take shortcuts every now and then. If you get caught up in your own routines, you'll never stumble across these "happy accidents" as Bob Ross would put it. Happy painting!

About the exhibit

Color Abstractions is an exhibit featuring 62 artists, emerging and known, from across Texas that explore interesting or unexpected uses of color in art. It may be a particular color motif or a significant pop that appears in the artist's work. It may be a bold prismatic explosion on the canvas or a subtle expression of hue or chroma. All art is for sale, and masks are required.
